

Obama: Up next is Fredo.

Trump: F

Obama: Now hold on.

Trump: F

Obama: Donald.

Trump: I don't care. He sold out the family to Roth. F.

Biden: I'm willing to hear Donald out on this. Fredo is a largely unsympathetic character.

Obama: I can't believe you two right now.

Trump: What is there to hear out? Fredo was a pathetic human being from start to finish. What happens in the first movie, Barry, when he has to protect Vito? Do you remember?

Biden: Are you talking about the scene-

Trump: He bobbles the gun and cries like a baby.

Obama: You can't blame him for that.

Trump: Yes I can. I absolutely can. He bobbles the gun and cries like a baby. Like a total baby.

Bush: In the second film, Fredo is actually seen crying as a baby.

Biden: That was an infant with pneumonia, you bastard.

Clinton: Wasn't he banging cocktail waitresses two at a time?

Trump: What?

Clinton: In the first movie. When they're in Vegas, Harrison Ford says Fredo was banging cocktail waitresses two at a time.

Biden: That wasn't Harrison Ford.

Obama: While his memory of the film isn't the greatest, Slick Willy is correct. In the first film, the character Moe Greene states Fredo was banging cocktail waitresses two at a time.

Bush: Fredo should be promoted to D tier, but only for that reason.

Trump: Oh please, Fredo cannot lay claim to any sexual prowess. He literally gets cucked at the beginning of the second movie. F tier and that's final.

Obama: If I can get a word in, I would like to say that Fredo is A-tier because his character is essential to the overall message of the second film. The Godfather Part II is about how the monomaniacal pursuit of power can lead to the destruction of one's soul. In killing Fredo to achieve complete victory, Michael destroyed the very thing he had been fighting for – his family.

[A pause]

Trump: What was that big word you used?

Obama: What?

Trump: That big word that began with an "m."

Obama: Uhhh...

Bush: The word Barack used was "monomaniacal." In context, it means Michael was obsessed with power. To my knowledge, this word has never been used outside the novel Moby Dick.

Trump: Then why didn't you just say that? Also, I loved Moby Dick. Tremendous book.

Biden: I refuse to believe you have read Moby Dick. Nobody ever finishes that book, much less someone who demands his advisors write him one-page bulleted lists.

Trump: At least I can complete my sentences, Sleepy Joe. And for your information, they had us read excerpts from Moby Dick when I was in high school. My favorite character was Queequeg. He was a total savage.

Obama: Gentlemen, we're getting off track.

Clinton: Doesn't Queequeg sleep with the narrator in one of the scenes?

Obama: Gentlemen!

Clinton: No, no. This is good. There was a scene at the beginning where the main character and Queequeg have to share a bed. I specifically remember the phrase “cozy, loving pair.”

Trump: Of course you’d remember that.

Clinton: Cozy, loving pair. Cozy, loving pair...

Obama: Slick Willy is once again correct. There is a scene toward the beginning of Moby Dick where the narrator Ishmael and the harpooner Queequeg have to share a bed. But gentlemen, we have to move on.

Biden: Agreed.

Obama: I’m putting Fredo in A tier so we can move on.

Trump: What’s the point of us even having these debates if it’s just going to be you doing whatever you want? Seriously.

Bush: While I agree with Barack that Fredo is a well-written character and integral to the message of the second film, the person creating the list cannot have unilateral power to decide how it is ultimately organized.

Biden: I’ll bail you out, Barack. Fredo is A-tier.

Obama: Slick Willy? Will you agree with me so we can shut Donald up and move on?

[Silence]

Obama: Bill? Bill?

Clinton: Oh yeah, Fredo in A tier is fine.

Trump: Oh please, he’s not even paying attention.

Obama: We’re moving on. Next up is Apollonia.

Clinton: S. Instant S.

Trump: Agreed. Tremendous onscreen presence.

Obama: Now what the hell is that supposed to mean?

Trump: Don’t play Mr. Nice Guy, Barry. You know what I’m talking about.

Obama: I’m afraid I don’t. You’ll have to explain.

Biden: Even I can see through this lie, Barack. There’s no way you don’t know what he’s talking about. He’s talking about Apollonia’s boobs.

Obama: I mean...

Bush: Can either of you provide an argument in favor of Apollonia being S-tier that does not center on her breasts?

[Silence]

Bush: Anyone?

[Clinton leaves the call]

[A pause]

Obama: We just lost Bill.

Biden: Jesus Christ.
